Jack O'Neill was not only the inventor of the wetsuit, he also trademarked the name "Surf Shop". He was born in Denver and raised in Long Beach. He ultimately came up with the idea of a Neoprene-based wetsuit that could allow surfers to stay afloat and surf longer in cold water.

O'Neill moved to San Francisco for a job that didn't work out. By 1952 he opened his first "Surf Shop" — which was the first shop ever dedicated to surfing. He trademarked the phrase "Surf Shop," and shaped his own boards made out of balsa wood.

After a short-lived surf session, O'Neill and his friends would burn old tires on the beach to thaw their numb bodies. They were always looking for a way to keep warm.

Over the years, O'Neill continuously redesigned a cold-water wetsuit so that it would allow flex fit as well as thermal insulation. He eventually created the first full suit, called the "Animal skin" — that remained the best-selling wetsuit for the next 30 years. He invented the first neoprene injection mold with flex panels to allow customized fit and superior comfort and insulation.

Today, the O'Neill brand has perfected their design with new advancements in their new "techno butter" suits — the fourth generation was released Fall 2017.

O'Neill was also a navy pilot at one point in his life, which you will see through his experiments with the hot air balloon and air ship photos of his attempted launches and flights to Monterey.

In the late 50's he moved his family to Santa Cruz. His first Santa Cruz "Surf Shop" was directly in our delivery area of the parking lot outside of the "Jack O'Neill Lounge". This is now a historical landmark, marked by the mural that leads surfers and beach goers now to Cowell's Beach.
