Black Friday, Cyber Monday, Travel Tuesday: The Best Travel Sales And Deals

Laura Begley Bloom Senior Contributor

It's that time of the year: when people across the country line up in droves to blow their hard-earned bucks on televisions and refrigerators during Black Friday and Cyber Monday sales. But the smartest Americans are spending their money on experiences, not things. There couldn't be a better time to book travel for the year ahead.

During the week around Black Friday and Cyber Monday, the travel industry goes on sale. Alanna Smith, editor at deal site TravelPirates, says that travelers can save as much as 55% on hotels, tours, vacation packages and more. The best day to score a flight deal is November 27, which has been nicknamed Travel Deal Tuesday , according to Hopper, an app that uses data to predict and analyze airfares. And many other discounts are even extending beyond Travel Deal Tuesday.

A word of advice: Most sales are only available for a short timeframe and for travel during a specific window. Be sure to check the fine print for other restrictions like minimum stays, black-out dates, upfront payments and nonrefundable rates. (And keep in mind that the details listed below are based on available information; you should verify all rates and booking information with the individual provider.)
