Change on Polk Street

After opening Vertigo Bar 15 years ago, Ken Meade has sold the Polk Street bar and dance venue to new owners. It's unclear whether the new owners, who also run Iron Horse and Playland Bar, will continue to operate Vertigo as Vertigo in the future.

Very special cans from Almanac Beer Co.

Alameda's mostly sour brewery Almanac has just launched its new Sournova series of barrel-aged sour beers in 16-ounce cans. The first is Blueberry Sournova, with future naturally conditioned, mixed-culture, oak-aged sour ales arriving every few months. This is a pretty big deal for beer lovers, as barrel-aged sours are almost never available in cans.

A new brewer for Speakeasy Ales & Lagers

Over in Hunters Point, Speakeasy has a new head brewer: Phil Cutti, the president of the San Francisco Brewers Guild and founder of Headlands Brewing Company. The former lead brewer, Clay Jordan, has left for family reasons.
